In recent years, they have been known for their use of computer viruses to commit cyber crimes, such as spam email, denial of service attacks and identity theft. Hackers may modify existing programs or create entirely new programs. Hacking is a form of illegal activity and most jurisdictions uphold this view. Hackers have illegally decrypted official information such as credit card numbers and users' passwords. They may also use hacking in illegal activities like libel, trade secret theft and computer sabotage. They have also used malware to subvert equipment or infrastructure. ^ Coogan, Dave; Moody, Russell (2005-03-01). "Hackers and Terrorists: A Threat to Corporate America?".
